<Background>

Born in Japan and spent her primitive years in the US.

She majored in American Politics and spent a year in University of Missouri, St. Louis as an exchanged student.

After graduating from university, she started her career at an organization promoting overseas development of Japanese contents. Since then, she has been working at a global company utilizing her English communication skill. She is currently working as a marketer at a global life science company.

Establishing her career in a multicultural environment, she has abundant experience of giving presentations in English and interpretation at meetings.

She puts timeless effort to blush up her English skill as she recently attended interpretation school after her full-time job.

Not just pursuing her career in a business world, she is also active as a bilingual MC.
